THE LOST FOUND.

Long Search by a Fayetteville Man

Fayetteville Express, Nov. 26. In the year 1863, Alfred H. Johnson, Jr., a son of Mr. Alfred H. Johnson, of this place, then a lad about nine years of age left his uncle's residence near Winchester, and went off with a man of the name of Heidler, who was a Sergeant in the Federal army. Mr. Johnson was in the Confederate army at the time, and Heidler, who appeared to entertain a fondess for the boy, induced the little fellow to believe that his father had been taken prisoner and was then at Chattanooga, where he would soon have an opportunity of seeing him. Mr. Johnson knew nothing of his son's departure until the close of the war and, as a matter of course, was deeply grieved when he learned the facts. He at once set about ascertaining his whereabouts, but made slow progress in obtaining information. Finally, after writing innumerable letters and following up closely the slender clue he had obtained, he traced the boy to Dauphin, a town in Perusylvania, where Heidler resided. He immediatly wrote to that individual and obtained reply, stating that Alfred had remained with him some time, but finally left and was then somewhere in the State of New York. Heidler volunteered to make inuntries, and evidently did, for he soon gave Mr. Johnson further intelligence of his whereabouts. The auxious father continued the search with unremitting industry and received alternately hopeful and unsatisfactory intelligence, but utterly failed to obtain the boy's exact address so as to communicate with him. A few weeks ago the postmaster at Winchester received a letter from a person in Binghamton, New York, signing himself "A. Johnson," making inquiries relative to the family of Mr. Russey, the boy's tincle, which he immediately turned over to that gentleman. It was evident, in view of the writer's questions, that the letter was from the long lost son, and certain questions likely to establish his identity, if correctly answered, were propounded to him through the postmaster, and satisfactory replies received. Mr. Johnson then communicated with his son from whom he had heard nothing for eleven long and weary years. A reply was promptly received, written in clear and egible style, and couched in language creditable alike to the head and heart of the writer.

Altred, who is now twenty-one years of age, wrote that he had long believed his father dead, having heard that he was killed during the war; hence his long silence and failure to make inquiries concerning him. He inclosed his photograph, which shows him to be a remarkably handsome and intelligent looking young man whose general appearance in licates anything but ill-usage. He is learning the printer's trade in the office of the Republican, a daily paper published in Binghampton, and his apprenticeship will expire in May next, when he will visit his father. Then, what a joyful meeting there will be between father and son-what a tender reunion after so many long years of separation and sorrow.

transpired in the jury room. One Way to Resume. In his annual report, the Comptroller of the Currency says that if Congress should provide for the withdrawal of legal tender notes and the issue of national bank notes. as needed in place thereof, when the amount of legal tender notes should be reduced to say $300,000,000, the legal tende notes would then be in demand; and i proportion as they should be reduced ! mount, the demand for them would increase, until, finally, when the amount of bank notes, issued should be largely in excess of the amount of legal tender notes outstanding, the national bank notes would hemselves be withdrawn at certain seasons of the year, on account of the difficulty of expense of obtaining lawful money with which to redeem them; the gold coin of the country would then make its appearance, in answer to the demand for an additional amount of lawful money, and pecie payment would follow. Should the payment of bank notes equently demanded, banks of issue could not safely invest their capital in real estate, oans or doubtful stocks, bonds or accommodation notes which require renewal, or n loans or doubtful security, but would be supelled to have their capital at all times invested in loans which would be promptly paid at maturity. Such a condition would indicate a healthful business and promote sound banking, and the reduction of the amount of legal tender notes, accompanied with such increase of interchangeable bank notes as might be required would secure a roper system of redemption, would render ree banking practicable and would gradual ly restore specie payment, without necessarily decreasing the amount of their specu-

During the fight two white girls were recaptured from the Indians. It appears they are sisters, Adelaide and Julia Gerdiscussing the subject and talking I man, aged five and seven years respectively from Georgia. To the Colonel they state that their father, mother, brother, and one sister, were murderered, and that they and two other sisters were kept prisoners. They have no positive knowledge of their whereabouts. Their story of woe and suffering is simply too horrible to relate. They were almost paked and nearly starved. They are now under the charge of Surgeon Waters, and receive every care and attention. When strong enough to endure the journey they will be forwarded to Leavenworth. I most earnestly recommend that an ample annual provision be made for these children by the government out of the annuity appropriation for the benefit of the Cheyenne Indians.

ONE of the least flattering tributes ever paid to a rising young artist, has been paid to a Cincinnati dauber by a Western critic: of wearing corsets be obviated by the ladies | "He possesses some merit as an artist, but aving their husbands rub them after taking it is hard to say whether it lies in laudoff the garments aforesaid. The idea is a good one. We have sent Mrs. Vibbard's hasband a ream of sand-paper. of spirs betrays their characters. Even MARK TWAIN says that since he has be-come a director in an accidental insurance scudding under bare poles!" An erring husband, who had exhausted
